
Bids will be solicited on Sept. 1 for the construction of Livermore Fire Station No. 4, shown here in an architect's rendering by Randall Schlientz and Associates. The firehouse will be built on a half-acre site at Concannon Boulevard and Cordoba Avenue at at an estimated cost of $147,516. Revenue sharing funds will pay for $140,000 of the cost. After the contract is awarded, construction will begin in October and should take seven to eight months to complete.

Fallon project richer despite meet delay

DUBLIN — The crucial county meeting fell through, but Fallon House preservationists have $3,000 to put toward rebuilding the historic Foothill Road cottage.

There was no quorum for yesterday's important Alameda County Parks Advisory Commission meeting in Hayward — much to the chagrin of Dublin Historical Preservation Association president Judy Earl.

"I was really going to do a selling job. And I was there — but they weren't," she related yesterday.

But the good news was that she had just received a check for $3,000 from Foothill Road developers Stoneson Co. and Taubman Western Associates.

The City of Pleasanton had written a letter to the developers,

RIA promises new ways to solve Murray squeeze

DUBLIN— When the Murray School District initiated discussions on intermediate school housing options last April, nine prospective solutions were advanced.

Several others have been tossed into the hopper by the Citizens Advisory Committee and the administration since, but the focus in recent weeks has been on the basic question — whether to convert a present K-6 or K-8 school or maintain the status quo.

A survey has been sent out to Murray district parents on this basic question, with final compilations expected by the end of the month. The survey, which was completed by district teachers early this summer, has drawn fire from some quarters as has the Citizens Advisory Committee.

The survey and committee have, in effect, lead to birth of Residents - In - Action, a Dublin School area group that opposes conversion of that school to solely seventh - eighth grade use, but supports any plan that would improve the Donlon School facility and/or busing the required number of Donlon seventh - eighth graders to other schools "to improve conditions."

The RIA has stated it will come forth with its own solutions in time for the Sept. 1 CAC meeting at Frederiksen School. Jerry Herrington and Lenore Holmes of the group said they are basically against conversion "if it means we are going to lose a neighborhood school."

RIA also claimed that CAC chairman Robert Scheppler had tentatively concluded, at a May 12 meeting, that the committee's ultimate recommendation would be a temporary one for "two to four years." The group further claimed a "reliable source" had said that a new school might be built south of Highway 580 (pending growth in that area) and that school would be an elementary school; leaving the converted school permanent.

The RIA, in the same release, also opined that the CAC survey "is not an accurate polling ... residents contacted by RIA expressed confusion by its wording." RIA has requested a new survey accompanied by a concise information statement be sent to all residents of the district.

District leaders would not conjecture on the outcome of the survey, though the same one filled out by district teachers found 63 per cent favoring conversion and 31 per cent opposing. One-hundred and seventy-one teachers responded.

Teachers at Dublin School overwhelmingly opposed conversion.

Of the nine original solutions put forth by a committee of principals and central office staff, several dealt with conversion. The nine original solutions are:

1) Status quo, 2) convert one K-8 to 7-8, 3) make Wells-Cronin a 7-8 complex, 4) all schools become K-8, 5) convert one K-8 to 7-8 and redistrict other K-6 schools and portables, 6) combine DublinNielsen 7-8, leave Wells and Donlon, 7) K-5 plus 6-8 combinations or other options, 8) one seventh grade school, one eighth grade school, 9) Donlon to Cronin, combine Nielsen - Dublin, close Cronin.

Teri Jordan, left, and Barbara Frye survey the sea of asphalt which represents the nearly completed recreational vehicle storage yard in their neighborhood. The residents of single family homes have been fighting for the past few months to get the city to rule the lot invalid. Residents of nearby condominiums, however, want the lot to store the recreational vehicles. (Times Photo)

Storage yard fight escalates

PLEASANTON — Stoneridge residents have contacted the state Attorney General's office in their fight to try to rid their neighborhood of a recreational vehicle storage yard which the city and developer insists is legal.

Teri Jordan called the Attorney General's office yesterday to explore the possibility of taking some kind of action against Stoneson Corporation for allegedly misleading homebuyers into thinking that a grassy area would occupy the lot which now has a recreational vehicle storage yard.

Jordan said that Stoneson sales personnel promised her and her neighbors a grassy area on the plot and had a map in the sales office which corroborated that notion. This despite the fact that Stoneson had an approved subdivision map for a recreational vehicle yard in March, 1971, some three or four months before the Jordans and other neighbors bought their homes in June, 1971, she said.

Jordan also claimed that buyers were quoted different prices for various new home options and she wants the Attorney General's office to investigate it.

The recreational vehicle lot issue, which has been on the back burner for a few months, will be the subject of a public hearing Monday night before the city council.

The residents contend that the grassy park planned for the lot was on an approved map, just as the recreational vehicle lot was on another approved map. They feel both have equal status and think the council should rule that the map with the grassy area takes precedence over the other.

The planning commission already ruled on the question and found that the recreational vehicle lot is located properly Commissioners expressed sympathy for the homeowners, but felt that their hands were tied legally. They tried to soften the impact of the lot on the neighborhood by attaching setback and landscaping conditions.

The planning commission and city staff's position is that the grassy area appeared only an a Planned Unit Development map.

This kind of map, according to City Manager Bill Edgar, was little more than an architectural rendering in 1971. The Planned Unit Development was just a permit procedure then — get the permit, then you proceed with other, more substantial maps, namely the tenatative and final subdivision maps.

When Stoneson got the to the tentative and final subdivision map stages, the recreational vehicle lot was shown on those maps, said Edgar.

Now the city procedures are different, said the city manager. The PUD maps must be consistent with the tentative and final maps. It was changed precisely to avoid the kind of confusion which has arisen on the recreational vehicle lot, said Edgar.

Jordan also accused the staff of irregular procedures in dealing with the recreational vehicle yard. The city wrote up Jordan's appeal incor-

State aid denied plan for industrial sewer

Local officials attempting to pry funds from the state to pay for an extra industrial capacity to be added to the proposed residential sewage pipeline received a quick "no" yesterday.

"They seemed to have their minds made up a ahead of time," said Ron Hyde, chairman of the Livermore - Amador Valley Water Management Agency (LAVWMA).

The best that representatives of the State Water Resources Control Board (SWRCB) could offer was a parellel pipeline that would carry industry sewage into San Francisco Bay. But valley voters would have to foot the bill for that as well, Hyde said.

"I guess we didn't prove our case was exceptional," LAVWMA member and Livermore Mayor Helen Tirsell said.

In November, valley voters will decide whether they want to increase their monthly sewerage service bills from $2 to $3 by funding a super-sewer pipeline. It would pump effluent to an outfall near the Oakland International Airport, where it would be carried out to San Francisco Bay.

The cost of the pipeline has been estimated at between $25 and $30 million.

LAVWMA members are trying to add to the proposed 15.72 million - gallons - per - day (mgd) an extra 4 mgd to carry industrial waste from Livermore and Pleasanton. Supposedly, the extra capacity would attract industry to the valley, aimed at lowering both local property taxes and the long commute to work for at least a portion of the valley's population.

Federal and state monies would pay for 87.5 per cent of the residential pipeline, but not of the industrial capacity. The local cost would be upwards of $3 million, it has been estimated.

Negotiations to include the LAVWMA pipeline with the East Bay Dischargers Authority (EBDA) interceptor station for dumping the effluent have apparently stalled. Hyde said that EBDA officials told him it would have cost $10 million to join the EBDA interceptor two years ago, so current negotiations would begin at that figure.

Hyde said LAVWMA considers that figure too high, and is discussing the situation with SWRCB officials.

LAVWMA is still attempting to draw up contingency measures should voters fail to approve the pipeline. Fines of $6,000 a day could be levied if the valley continues dumping effluent into Alameda Creek, a surface flow channel for Fremont-Newark domestic water supplies.

LAVWMA members discussed a possible ballot measure drawn up by attorney Ken Scheidig, but no final determinations were arrived at or even considered. The final ballot wording must be presented to the county by August 20 for inclusion on the November 2 ballot.

E. Bay Parks wins gift

SAN RAMON — The East Bay Regional Park District has just acquired a surprise gift of 187 acres about a mile south of Las Trampas Regional Wilderness.

EBRPD was first offered the land four years ago, but the paperwork was never completed. A new subdivider, The Housing Group of Lafayette, made good on the original gift offer with Contra Costa County Planning Director Anthony Deshaeus following through with the official actions necessary for the transfer.

The original donors were Rodger L. Podva of San Ramon, Alfred P. Otto of Piedmont and Transamerica Development Co.

That subdivision map was about to expire on Aug. 6 of this year when the matter of the gift was revived.

The land contains three fresh - water lagoons and 4,000 feet of Las Trampas Ridge. It lies directly west of Danville, and Prospect Street leads toward the parcel.

Cuts prompt transportation study

Cutting of bus service for sixth through eighth graders in the Pleasanton Joint School District will affect 165 students in the Vintage Hills, West Del Prado and Amador - Jensen Estates areas.

District director of transportation Mike Ananos said the district was carrying three bus loads from those areas to Pleasanton School.

Busing for sixth through eighth graders was one of those items cut from the 1976-77 budget, providing a saving of $30,000.

Other cuts included uniforms for maintenance personnel, towels and towel service, one early retirement, overstaffing of 5½ full-time equivalent teachers, and reduced cost of the testing program.

The Pleasanton district staff was directed to compile a report on student transportation to be reviewed at the September meeting.

Trustee Karen Finn said she had taken two walks from the outer reaches of the Del Prado and Vintage Hills areas to Pleasanton School to determine the distances and any hazards enroute.

Mrs. Finn walked from Orofino Court and Chardonnay Drive to Pleasanton, a distance of some 2¼ miles, and from Hansen and Black to the school on First Street, a distance of about 2½ miles.

Board member Betty Nostrand asked about the possibility of indirect busing, whereby students could walk to Vintage Hills School and then be bused the remaining distance— or to Amador Valley High School.

Mrs. Finn also repeated her assertion that "Pleasanton schools really do not have an adequate music program."

"Music is a very integral part of our life....I have a feeling that a lot of teachers are not too secure in teaching it.

The staff was directed to put together a report on the choral music program for all grade levels and present it to the board at the October meeting.

Pleasanton board members approved the 1976-77 budget of $7,175,441 Wednesday night after a brief public hearing.

The district's base revenue average daily attendance is pegged to drop by 101 students to 5,264. However, the base revenue is increased from $986.75 to $1,081.63 per ADA.

Per student basic and special allocations have been increased as follows: $2.08 for grades K-3, $1.93 for grades 4-6, and $3.69 for grades 7-8, adding to $12,844.

Among the significant changes on the expenditures side of the ledger are those for instructional supplies, utilities and buildings and improvement of buildings.

Instructional supplies have been increased $46,000 from the publication budget figure, reflecting trustee requests to increase allocations 10 per cent for K-6 and 15 per cent for 7-8.

Improvement of buildings is up from the publication figure of $3,234 to $8,534— which includes $4,600 for moving a relocatable to Vintage Hills School and some carryover funds.

Certificated salaries total $4.1 million, classified salaries $900,510 and employee benefits $751,627.

Teacher salaries totaled $3,986,141 last year, classified salaries $883,376 and benefits $648,199.

In other business, trustees decided to hold a joint boards session with Amador at 7:30 p m. on Aug. 24 and a special elementary session on Aug. 25, also at 7:30

A resolution giving notice to bidders for moving a relocatable to Vintage Hills was withdrawn as cost of the project will be under $5,000; the board approved withdrawing from a joint powers agreement with the California League of Federally - Aided School Districts, learning that the lattee is considered a political entity, and agreed to a public hearing so the board may reply to the California School Employees Association's salary and fringe benefit proposal.

Public works to seek tax for CC roads

SAN RAMON — The Contra Costa County Public Works Department would like to obtain a five cent property tax levy next year for improvements on major city and county roads. They hope to have this proposal put on the Nov. 2 ballot.

Paul Kilkenny, Assistant Director of Public Works, made the announcement at a meeting of the San Ramon Valley Liaison Committee yesterday morning.

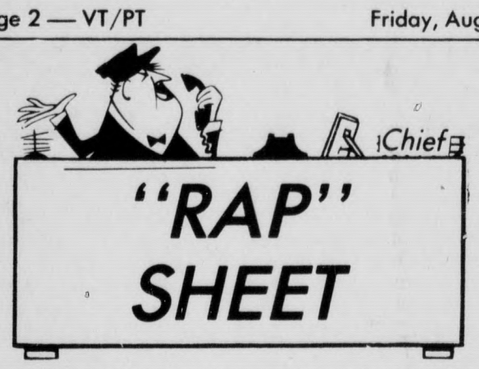
Other long range plans, such as a valleywide transit system, are temporarily being shelved because of the incorporation project. Kilkenny indicated that too many problems can crop up since funding sources differ for incorporated and unincorporated areas.

Even the budget, which is tentative at this point, will be affected by incorporation. "We'll probably be receiving about the same amount of money and be abie to retain our maintenance curve but the funding sources will be reshuffled," Kilkenny said.

At the present time the gasoline tax is the prime source of revenue for road maintenance. Kilkenny stressed the fact that property taxes could not be used for road improvement purposes at this time. There are approximately 20 other sources such as fees, fines, and permits but the money coming in from these provides only minor assistance.

"Fee mechanisms are money losers. They were meant to be control mechanisms; not for revenue," said Kilkenny.

He continued, " We're faced with the problem of tight money like everyone else and we're trying to let it be known that zero dollars is coming up and we must do something about it.



Marijuana plants found in Iroquois Avenue home

LIVERMORE — A 29-year-old Livermore man was arrested on suspicion of growing and possessing marijuana after an anonymous phone call led police to his residence early Wednesday.

Detective Bill Bankert received a tip that plants were sprouting in the backyard of an Iroquois Avenue home. He went to the rear of an adjacent residence and observed six marijuana plants, each approximatly four feet tall.

Bankert, Det. Dave Hollander and officer Phillip Aguiar contacted a woman at the home, who stated, "They're my husband's plants." The woman called her husband at work, and he returned home and allowed officers to search the residence.

The suspect's wife handed officers three baggies of marijuana from the couple's refrigerator. A search revealed a small quantity of marijuana seeds, marijuana cigarette butts and a small piece of suspected hashhish.

The suspect's wife told police that the harvested crop came from her husband's plants.

William Eugene Forbes, 29, of 1146 Iroquois Ave., was booked on suspicion of possession and cultivation of marijuana.

High speed chase leads to arrest

LIVERMORE — Two hours after a motorcyclist was arrested for outstanding traffic warrants, the man who was his passenger was arrested following a 30-minute high speed chase through Livermore, police reported yesterday.

At 3:20 a.m. Wednesday, police made a routine traffic stop on a motorcyclist at North Livermore Avenue near 580. The driver, Daniel Wayne Garrett, 18, was found to have outstanding traffic warrants, and was booked at city jail.

Garrett's passenger, Steven Douglas Hall, 19, of 948 Acacia St., left on Garrett's cycle. As he departed, he allegedly accelerated to more than 70 mph, but pursuing police couldn't catch him.

Almost two hours later, police spotted the cyclist on Pacific Avenue opposite South Livermore Avenue. Police stopped trailing the cycle as the suspect drove up Mines Road, deciding instead to catch him on the return trip.

Minutes later, police heard movement and flashed a spotlight on the cycle driving slowly with no lights. The cycle then acclerated with police in close pursuit.

Speeds of more than 100 mph were reached as the cycle led two police units to Tesla and then South Vasco Road. The chase quickly ended, however, when the cycle ran out of gas and drifted to a stop.

Hill was booked on suspicion of resisting arrest, reckless driving, and throwing a lighted substance on the roadway.

Learn how to identify a junco

Did you know the tiny brown - and - white winter visitor at your backyard bird feeder may have traveled all the way from Washington?

It's true, says Pat Jacobson of Pleasanton, who traps and bands at her home. She just got word that black - eyed junco, weighing just an ounce (about the size of a small candy bar), had made it all the way to Washington from the Valley just three weeks after it was banded.

Teals from Alaska, geese from Canada are just some of the travelers the Valley plays host to every winter. Meanwhile, other birds who live here in summer take winter vacations in the tropics, without a bit of concern for high - season rates.

Predators of the air — a great horned owl, barn owl and hawk — are three of the displays Pat Jacobson will be using for her Pleasanton and Livermore adult classes on birding. (Times photo)

"We're lucky to be on the Pacific Flyway," Mrs. Jacobson says. "It means we are along the migratory-routes of ducks, willets, orioles, hummingbirds and lots of other birds. More than 200 kinds of birds have been sighted in the Valley, including the handsome black, gray and white mockingbird and the striking red - winged blackbird — to name two commonly recognized year - round residents.

Out in the country, the fluffy barn owl, the majestic great horned owl, hawks, sparrows and even golden eagles can be seen.

How do you tell one bird from another? How can you attract them to your home? Is there a way to get involved in bird banding, the Audubon Society, or other organizations?

Pat Jacobson will have the answers in a course she is offering through the Amador High adult education department for the second time and through Livermore's adult school for the first time this fall.

In addition, she is leading birding field trips every Thursday morning through the Amador adult school

The new Livermore class will be on Monday evenings, beginning Sept 13; registration begins Aug. 23. Holding a bachelor's degree in natural science and two teaching credentials, the instructor also brings to her course years of interest in birds.

How to identify birds? That will be the subject of several class meetings. First, she'll talk about structural differences between birds of prey (who, for example, have strong curved beaks for tearing meat), birds who stick with berries and seeds, and those which eat foods from both categories, such as robins and scrub jays.

"Besides structural differences, you can tell birds apart by their calls, color markings, silhouettes, size, nesting materials, shape and location, behavior and the way they fly," says the bird enthusiast.

"Some can live in only one type of habitat — such as dead oak trees," she said. "People should realize that so they don't thoughtlessly clear away the habitat."

Many people could enjoy a colorful array of bird visitors, if they knew how to attract them to their yard. Mrs. Jacobson has some advice on bird feeding:

"You have to make a commitment to keep it up, year after uear, or you shouldn't start it.

"I found birds became imprinted to my yard during October, November and December of the first year of their lives. That was where they got their food.

"If they had returned the second winter and I had discontinued the feeding, they could have died before they found another source of food."

Once willing to make the commitment, it's easy to set up a bird feeding station.

Just find a spot that's out of the way of marauding cats — say, the end of a tree branch or even the top of a tether - ball pole — and hang up any container filled with wild bird seed of the type sold in supermarkets and pet shops.

Some plump raisins may be added to delight birds who prefer berries to seeds.

If you like hummingbirds, fill a specially designed feeder with one part of sugar to four parts water. Never use honey, which will cause a fatal fungus infection in the tiny birds, Mrs. Jacobson warns.

Bird banding? "It's fun! I catch the birds in a trap, attach a tiny metal band that has a number on it, and release the birds unharmed.

"If someone finds a banded bird, they send the number to the Fish and Wildlife Service in Washington, D.C. along with information on when and where the bird was found.

"Then the service notifies me, and sends them a reply telling when and where the bird was banded."

Birdwatching — under such an enthusiastic teacher, it can become a window onto a whole new world.

Suspended sentence in manslaughter

OAKLAND — John Michael Beserra, who pleaded guilty to charges of vehicular manslaughter after an accident which killed a 12-year-old boy, was sentenced to a two-year suspended sentence and a $315 fine Tuesday.

In September, 1975, Beserra's car collided with a vehicle driven by Veronica Dougherty of Livermore at Seventh and H streets. Michael Kellman, 12, a passenger in her car, was killed in the accident.

Dougherty's son, John, also 12, received injuries as a result of the accident but recovered. Mrs. Dougherty remained in critical condition for an extended period after the crash.

Superior Court Judge Hugh S. Koford handed down his decision Tuesday. Beserra is to pay a $315 fine, and will remain on probation for two years.

Beserra will return to court Oct. 5 at 9 a.m. for a progress report on his probation.

An agreement prompted Bessera to plead guilty to the vehicular manslaughter charge.

Big gift for Fallon project requesting the funding on behalf of DHPA. The organization originally needed the funds to move the 124 - year - old building to their historical center in Dublin But since the accidental burning of Fallon House on May 21, the group has decided to rpbuild it, using some of the original materials that survived the fire, and they intend to put the money toward that project.

Rebuilding will take considerably more money — as much as $30,000, according to one all - inclusive estimate.

Stoneson and Taubman are current owners of the heap of lumber that once was the Fallon House (notable not for its architecture but for the fact that it was built by early settler Jeremiah Fallon, one of the first local historical figures.)

In addition to the developers' $3,000 donation, DHPA members are hoping to recoup some $7,000 that had been allocated to their Fallon House relocation project by the Alameda County Parks Advisory Commission and the county Board of Supervisors.

When the building was burned, the funding reverted to two other restoration projects, one in Hayward and the other in Castro Valley. Now, local preservationists want the funding back in order to rebuild Fallon House. They have recovered the square nails, hinges, door handles and other metal hardware from the rubble, as well as some unburned door and window frames and lumber. They feel an accurate rebuilding will be possible because they have photographs, site plans and blueprints of the original house Mrs. Earl intends to re - schedule her "selling job" for next Thursday, when the advisory board is expected to meet in the county public works building at 399 Elmhurst St., Hayward.

Storage yard fight escalates

rectly several times, stating that they were appealing the minor modifications to the lot, when they really only wanted to appeal designation of the lot as recreational vehicle yard.

The city also failed to require plumbing and electrical permits and had no inspection for either, said Jordan. Also the staff issued a stop work order which allegedly never was lifted, though work continued until the yard now is about 98 per cent completed.

A homeowner supposedly would be fined if he or she didn't comply with the building department requirements, but the city never fined Stoneson for this supposed violation, said Jordan.

Harris gave The Times a long explanation about the legal advertisement being rewritten. He claimed that when it was rewritten, he called Jordan to get her opinion, and she didn't have any comment. He invited her to call back, but she didn't. When it was published, Jordan came in a few days before the meeting and said she didn't argee with the advertisement, said Harris.

The city attorney told her the ad was proper and the city would not change it, said Harris. It was the second change and third publication of the ad and it contained the section on minor modifications.

Chief Building Inspector Chuck Dobboins said that no one in the history of the city has been fined on a building inspection matter. Contractors are told about errors and given a reasonable time to correct the work, said Dobbins.

Unique scope

Volunteer group measures smog

Scientific researchers from Lawrence Livermore Laboratory have joined a volunteer group that uses a telescope to determine how dirty the air is that hovers over the San Francisco Bay Area.

About 30 members of the East Bay Astronomical Society, including amateur astronomstar-gazers and professional scientists, are using the 20-inch refracting telescope at Oakland's Chabot Observatory to watch how a known light source passes rays through the polluted atmosphere.

LLL technicians are watching the group's efforts closely, wondering if the technique could be used to improve detection of atmospheric pollution.

"The basic idea," says Terry Galloway, an LLL chemical engineer who heads up the volunteer group in his spare time, "is that you can learn a great deal about what's in the atmosphere by observing the deviations of light passing through it. We use the stars, and a special bulb we've placed on the top of Mt. San Bruno in South San Francisco, as light sources."

Chabot Observatory relocated to its present position in 1913 (before smog), and is an excellent low-ground perspective for viewing heavy particulate matter suspended in the air. "I realized Chabot wasn't in an ideal place for astronomy," Galloway recalls, "but it presented an almost unique opportunity to study man's pollution."

Researchers track and photograph stars whose light output is known through prior study (including the bulb atop Mt. Bruno). In this manner, they compile information on the location, identity and movement of particulate and gaseous pollutants by comparing light output through smog versus the known light output.

LLL Geophysicist Dr. William Porch is working with the volunteers on a method of measuring wind speed and direction between two fixed points (such as the 25-kilometer path from Chabot Observatory to Mt. San Bruno).

A powerful light atop Mt. San Bruno will project patterns to sensors at the observatory. Changes in air density over the long distance will make the light dance, and the sensors will measure light movement.

Other applications from the volunteers' findings might be found in addition to the two ongoing projects.

Researchers think the system might one day be refined to monitor air pollution over a representative part of the entire region, providing an effective "thermometer" of the day's amount of smog.

Mendenhall signups urged for new pupils

LIVERMORE— Seventh and eighth graders new to the Mendenhall School attendance area, who are new residents of the city, are asked to register at the school as soon as possible.

Registrations will be taken between 9 a.m. and 12 and 1 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

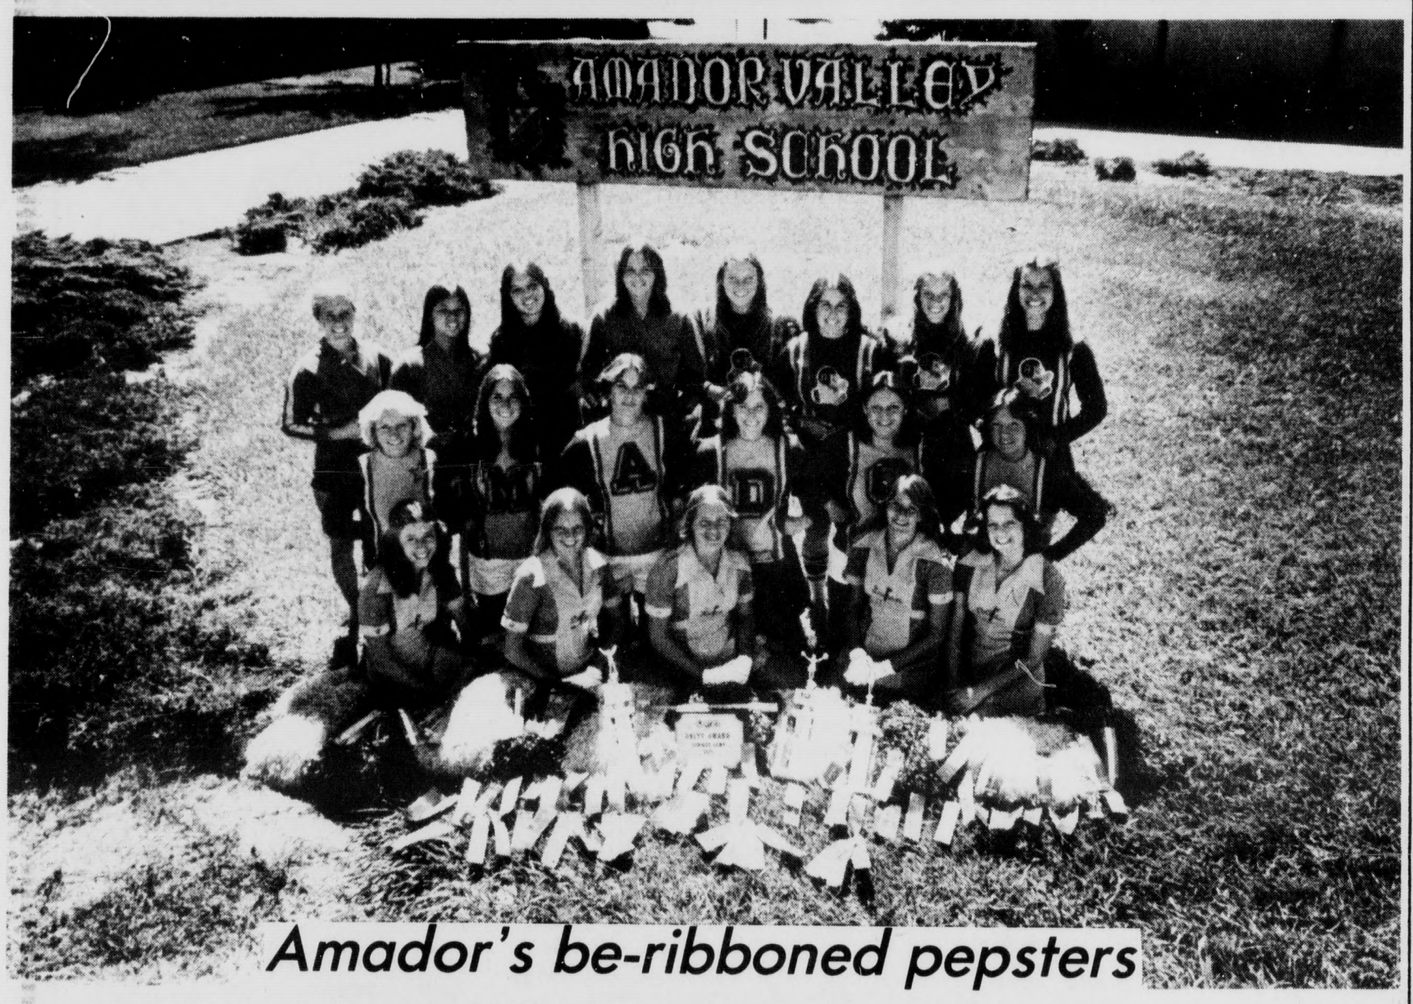
The school is located at 1701 El Padro Dr.



Amador's be-ribboned pepsters

Omens are a popular subject presently and if bringing home a bundle of trophies and ribbons from the UC Santa Cruz spirit squad camp is any omen, then Amador Valley High's athletic fortunes are about to go from good to great. Amador's varsity and junior varsity cheer leaders took part, along with the song leaders. They returned with a first-place trophy, two superior trophies, three spirit sticks, 117 ribbons and a unity spirit plaque, the latter won by the song leaders. In front, from left, are Alaina Bagley, Patty Gadd, Karen Redgwick, Susan Carlson, and Colleen Costello. Letter girls in middle are, from left, Kerri Kremer, Cindy Norton, Donna Guglielmo, Karen Duffy, Michele LaViera, and Cindy Kamatani. JV cheer leaders in back, from left, are Connie Lord, Debbie Lee, Kaui Ching and Becky Redgwick, and varsity cheer leaders Lori Gottschalk, Debbie Lloyd, Jane Bazar, and Lori Anderson. (Times photo)

Budget, tax hike O.K.

A $21.9 million budget, including $1.4 million set aside from an undistributed reserve for construction at the alley Campus in Livermore, was approved by a 4-2 vote of South County Community College District trustees.

Passage of the budget means a tax rate increase of 3.15 cents per $100 of assessed valuation to 69.35 cents. That is the maximum operating tax rate the district may levy under provisions of the recently - passed finance education measure, Senate Bill 1641.

Trustees expressed reluctance at approving the budget leading to an increase in the tax rate Trustees Charles Matzen of San Leandro and Lawrence "Ted" Jarvis of Castro Valley cast the dissenting votes.

"I have a lot of pride in what we're doing at Livermore, but I can't go for any tax increase from what I see here," Jarvis said.

Matzen said he preferred that the tax rate be held at its present level to allow a "workable" budget, and that the undistributed reserve currently contained too much money.

Trustee President E.J. "Jay" Chinn called the budget issue "one of the toughest" decisions he has had to make in 15 years on the board. "Our first priority is to get Livermore (Valley Campus) up to peak efficiency and get students off this (Hayward) campus," Chinn was quoted as saying.

The new budget represents a 4.75 per cent increase in the tax rate. The owner of a $50,000 home, for example, will pay $3.75 more per year for community college taxes, a college spokesman reported.

Architect Delp W. Johnson presented working drawings for three additional buildings at the Valley Campus, which were presented in the college's master plan. This new construction includes an addition to the present science building, a new physical education facility, and the first of three planned increments of an independent learning center.

Construction is slated for completion by September, 1977.

Livermore awarded study grant

LIVERMORE — A federal work - study grant of almost $5,000 has been awarded to the Livermore Unified School District for the coming year.

The grant comes from an appropriation under the terms of the 1968 Vocational Education Act.

Fred Sherwyn, district coordinator of career education explains, "The work-study program is designed to provide part - time employemnt in a public agency for vocational students who need earnings in order to continue thir occupational training."

Combined with the district's share of $1,500, the funds will provide part - time jobs for 20 needy students, who will earn a maximum of $45 per month.

Free school lunch policy

Valley school districts have announced policy for free and reduced price meals and free milk for children unable to pay the full price of meals and milk served under the National School Lunch and Special Milk Program.

Local school officials adopt the family-size income criteria for determining eligibility.

For Sunol Glen, eligibility for free meals and free milk are as follows; Family size, 1, monthly gross income zero to $307; family size, 2, zero to $403; family size, 3, zero to $498; family size, 4, zero to $594; family size, 6, zero to $770; family size, 7, zero to $850; family size, 8, zero to $929.

For reduced-price meals, the criteria are as follows; Family size, 1, monthly gross income of $308-$478; family size, 2, $404-$628; family size, 3, $499-$777; family size, 4, $595-$926; family size, 5, $684-$1,064; family size, 6, $771-$1,201; family size, 7, $851-$1,326; family size, 8, $930-$1,449.

Family size of one means a pupil who is his sole support. A foster child may be considered a family of one.

Free meals and milk, and reduced-price meals criteria are also set up on an annual gross income scale.

For example, a family of four having an annual gross income of $7,131 to $11,110 could be eligible for reduced price meals (for the school children in the family).

In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 per cent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for those benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, it should contact the school.

Under the provisions of the policy, Eleanor Keller, school nurse at Sunol Glen, will review applications and determine eligibility (for Sunol Glen School families). If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he may wish to discuss the decision with the determining official on an informal basis. A formal appeal may be instituted by writing to George J. Bury, P.O. Box A, Sunol, or calling 862-2026 for a hearing. The policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application.

A community blood bank at the John Knox United Presbyterian Church in Dublin will be initiated Saturday, Aug. 7. All volunteers ages 18 and up are asked to donate blood between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The bank is sponsored by the Alameda-Contra Costa Medical Association which reports a critical shortage of blood which is delaying many surgeries.

The John Knox Church Donor Club is concerned not only with the continuing demand for blood supplies, especially as Labor Day approaches, but also with the high cost of blood. Recipients of blood must pay $50 a pint if not a member of a blood bank or club.

In cooperation with the medical association, the John Knox Donor Club intends the blood bank to serve residents of Dublin, San Ramon, Pleasanton and Livermore. All blood given Aug. 7 will be available free of charge to any valley resident with an urgent need in the coming months.

Volunteers may make an appointment for Aug. 7, if convenient, by calling the church office at 828-1846.

BART's Bob Allen

Hanky panky

Editor, The Times:

BART Director Elmer Cooper "cleared"? You err! Not yet being indicted is a far cry from being "cleared."

Grand Juries deliberate in secret. We thus can't tell why they failed to indict Cooper and fellow Director Richard Clark. (I strongly suspect political hanky - panky.) Their reports set forth in sordid detail how both BART Directors abused their public trust.

A $3900 junket to the French Riviera; thousands of dollars allegedly spent for postage, office space, and secretarial - clerical help (all available free at BART) with little or no documentation; more thousands for unexplained in-District meals; of such stuff is corruption made.

Fraud enters when claims are made for expenses not incurred. Like Cooper's phantom $573 trip to Washington over Mothers Day weekend. While the plane he claimed to be riding was in flight, he was charging to BART long distance calls from his home phone. That same day he charged a $55 meal at Trader Vic's in Emeryville. There's no proof he even made the trip, let alone that it was on BART business if he did. Cooper signed and Clark approved the claim.

Cooper's story to the Grand Jury sounds equally fishy — a super-secret trip to censor a rumored upcoming news story about BART's new General Manager. He couldn't remember what name he traveled under, on what airline he flew, or when he left or arrived. Of such stuff is perjury made.

Personal expense claims of $9,485 (Clark) and $19,974 (Cooper) in their first ten months just don't wash. Clark as BART President OK'd his own and Cooper's claims for reimbursement.

BART politics let a bloc of five Directors control the Board. Such a bloc has ruled since the elected Board took over in 1974. Only the voters can correct the mischief at BART, and their best chance comes this November.

Five Directors come up for reelection, including three who voted to keep Cooper as President even after the Grand Juries confirmed the scandals. They are Clark of District 3 (Oakland, Piedmont, Berkeley, Albany, and Kensington); Hutch of District 7 (eastern San Francisco, Emeryville, western Oakland and Berkeley, and Alameda Naval Air Station): and Kirkwood of District 9 (northern San Francisco).

If candidates independent of any bloc, willing to vote their convictions instead of what some caucus dictates, can displace two of these three, voters can again restore honest, and integrity to the BART Board. As filing closes within a few weeks, there's no time to lose in gearing up a campaign.

All year school

It's back in the news. The proposal that was supposed to "increase classroom space by 20 percent without spending a dime on construction" is about to gain new life with a report being released today on the "success" of such a venture.

In the first major study of its kind, a Cambridge consulting firm reports its findings from 24 schools that have been functioning 12 months of the year. The results, says the report, are "a very promising innovation."

The idea is not new. We heard a great deal about it in California, and particularly in these fast - growth suburbs during that time when it seemed impossible to build new schools fast enough to keep pace with the boom in houses and babies.

Several variations of the "Year Round School" were talked about in this Valley. Vacations would be staggered, families would get to choose from one of several "school years" in order to keep their own vacation plans intact. But generally speaking, the idea of using classrooms 12 months of the year did not win favor among parents, teachers or even school boards.

Then, when the pill brought an end to the baby boom and the economy cut back on suburbia's housing explosion, talk of all - year schools seemed to fade.

But not in all of California, where 38 such programs have been operating "with success." All told, 19 states in 1974 were operating about 100 year - round schools; another 96 districts are prepared to make the leap.

Apart from the obvious savings in classroom space the Cambridge report finds that year - round schools have "special advantages for children from nomadic families," and "can minimize the usual learning loss which children experience during their three - month summer holiday."

Stand by for another push on the full time school.

FOCUS/Nationalism & Olympics

The robot intellect

"Zees cra-zee Americans, all-ways way-veeng ze flahgs."

The pseudo-cognoscenti say nationalism must be taken out of the Olympics if it is to survive through Moscow in 1980. That all must participate separate of national colors, anthemns and uniforms.

You would have had a tough time explaining this to hundreds of flag-waving Americans at Stade Olympique or The Forum, during the recently completed Games of the XXI Olympiad.

And how do they propose to tell the small countries that flag-waving and evidences of national pride are not in the best interests of the world community.

A week ago Monday, Lasse Viren of little Finland won the 10,000-meter run before 75,000 at the main stadium and millions more watching via television the world over.

As Viren circled the stadium in triumph, two countrymen leaped from the stands and linked hands with Viren, proudly carrying the blue cross and alabaster flag of Finland.

Moving down the home stretch, three more flag-bearing Fins joined the entourage and afforded escort to Viren as the cheering echoed across the stadium.

It was a moment to remember.

But other, similar moments cross the mind, most all reflecting national pride. The small but-constantly-smiling Japanese and Korean contingents were everywhere one of their own was competing—waving little flags and applauding every move.

Though Montreal is a cosmopolitan city, it takes great pride in its athletes. Diane Jones and Debbie Brill, track athletes unknown to us, are revered throughout Canada.

And if you think the U.S. television coverage appeared to be focusing constantly on just American athletes and accomplishments, you should have viewed CBC.

The Canadian cameras would go where Canadian athletes were, whether it be in an obscure canoe race or judo competition — picking up the major track and field or boxing events in a retrospective montage at the end of the day.

That's loyalty!

So it seems that to "save" the Olympics by eliminating flags and anthems may be quite difficult.

It just so happens that patriotism, love of country or nationalism, whatever you wish to call it, is going through a trying period in this country.

The flag does not represent me, say some; the words to the National Anthem are meaningless, and besides, the composition is difficult to play or sing. Must they play it at ALL sports and cultural events? Why must the flag be in every office of government.

And so it goes.

Yet, here are these hundreds if not thousands of Americans waving the Stars and Stripes everytime a runner moves to the front or one of the teams score.

A paradox?

Probably not. Possibly just another segment of that so-called "silent majority."

But, cut all traces of nationalism from the Games.

Go ahead and try.

First comes "re-educating" of the mass media. No more signing-off with a review of our medal winners, let alone playing patriotic or nationalistic tunes in the background.

No more raising the flags at medal ceremonies. Scratch national identifications from uniforms. Selling national flags, pins and emblems at the souvenir kiosks would not be in the "true" Olympic spirit of the future.

Yet, most all of us rally to a cause at one time or another, whether it's the company softball team, a civic project or a personal commitment.

To say we must participate devoid of identification is to suggest we become faceless robots.

The news media would never stand for it!

And that may be the biggest hurdle to continuing efforts at muting nationalism.

Curdled whey stirs city fray

"I still think the position we took initially was the best one for the community and for all concerned. The problem is now very close to being resolved."

That is the explanation offered by City Manager Wm. Edgar in the aftermath of that flap over "city staff was lax in enforcing industrial waste standards." The charge was levied by Councilman Frank Brandes. The Times reported that allegation, along with rebuttal provided by others close to the matter.

"The press and the public blast us if city hall fails to work closely with industry to understand and help resolve their problems," Edgar points out, and with good cause. Now, he feels, the city staff is being "unfairly roasted" for having "tried to work with one of Pleasanton's oldest industries" to work out an admittedly tough situation.

The Cheese Factory is the industry in question. The nature of that firm's wastes has always been a challenge. But only in recent years have the engineers begun to understand the magnitude of the problem, and the potential cost. In 1966 Pleasanton adopted a Uniform Sewer Ordinance which, among other things, requires each industry to take out a special permit.But the permit requirement "cannot appiy to industries like the Cheese Factory that were here long before the ordinance was passed," Edgar explains. The city is left with "working with this industry to resolve the problem." The goal is to relieve the city of any special costs, while also stopping short of driving a 50 - year - old business out of the community.

"That has been our goal, ever since we got the engineers' report, and understood the problem," Edgar says. It was not divulged to the public or the press "because we don't feel it is productive or fair to detail such negotiations step by step, particularly where we are making good progress, and a real answer is in sight."

That is the city's official explanation, and we are pleased to pass it along here, just as The Times was obligated to report the facts of the case in the first place. That way all of us get in on the act, and in on the final decision too.

Letters to the Times

SRV schools

Editor, The Times:

It appears that very few residents in the San Ramon Valley understand the way their schools are financed or the methods followed to prepare the School Districts budget well enough to ask pertinent questions or make specific recommendations. Both Taxpayers Together and the San Ramon Homeowners Association have urged the Board to provide, to neighborhoods or groups that request it, a program explaining the budgetary process. We support this concept as a positive step to inform the taxpayers in the Valley of where a large portion, approximately 40%, or their property tax dollars go and how they are spent. Provided with this knowledge, we are sure that in subsequent years more specific recommendations could be forthcoming.

We believe that local governmental agencies should be responsive to the demands of the community. We do not support meetings wich become public spectacles but we are convinced that the School Board should not summarily dismiss this proposal. In our view, programs of this nature provide the School District with a positive vehicle to explain to the community the problems that exist in school financing.

It appears that it is too late for this current budget cycle to implement a program of the type advocated by Taxpayers Together. However, there is no reason not to begin now to plan for next year. We ask the Board of Trustees to reconsider its decision and begin the process now which will provide for such a program.

Chairman, Taxpayers for Local Control Through Incorporation

Livermore 4th

Editor, The Times:

On behalf of the Community Affairs Committee, I would like to thank all those who worked so hard to make the City of Livermore's 4th of July celebration a success.

The parade, organized by Steve Shelby, of the Livermore Bicentennial Committee was a rousing way to start the festivities. The LARPD Staff and park leaders did an outstanding job — from helping the kids create delightfully imaginative floats, to putting in a full and arduous day directing "New Games." The participants in the parade — a great high school group, El Charro Drum and Bugle Corp., kids in costumesx kids on bicycles, and many more — helped start the day off in a great direction of family fun.

At May Nissen Park the combination of entertainment, games, and food booths provided a place for families of all ages to celebrate our 200th birthday in an appropriate holiday mood. A good time was had by all!

Title IX

Don Miller and the SAVE initiative aside, no one ever accused Livermore of rampant liberalism.

Vintners, ranchers, farmers and cowboys have moulded the town's outlook — rugged individualists. No collectivism for that group, just a man, his land, and his horse.

There's an influx of university-bred physicists these days, but the attitudes haven't changed much.

Except maybe for the part about a man and his horse. Today the women have horses too. They've also got college degrees and sometimes, good-paying jobs.

And surprisingly, the fruits of feminism are as sweet in Livermore as anywhere else. Sweeter perhaps.

The mayor is a female and so too is the town's county supervisor candidate. Some of its leading journalists are women and you couldn't count the number of girls kicking soccer balls around the playground.

Nobody here is ready to push Bella Abzug for Pope, but equality in Livermore is more than a promise to the ladies' auxilliary.

That's why it looked like a chauvanistic step backwards when the school board dragged its feet all over the Title IX issue.

But there has been reason to hedge.

Title IX, for those who don't read anything but "True Magazine" is a woman's best friend this side of the Equal Rights Amendment.

It is an addendum to federal education codes guaranteeing equal opportunity in education, for teachers, students, everybody.

A lot of federal funds are funneled into local school boards. The feds threaten withdrawl of their cash if schools don't comply with Title IX. Compliance includes a policy statement from each district, outlining goals for sexual equality.

Livermore still hasn't ratified its policy statement, though the school board has kicked the document around since springtime.

The intent of the statement should have been embraced immediately. Women deserve equal opportunity, whether it's a desk in the wood shop or the superintendent's office.

For practical reasons, however, the reluctance of some school board members is understandable.

Title IX, like a lot of other well-intended legislation, can be a pain in the agenda. For one, it's wrapped in red tape, starting with the demand for policy statements. It has some built in bureaucracy as well. Each school district must appoint a Title IX officer to make sure everyone adheres to policy. You can visualize administrators hiding in desk drawers when the call goes out for volunteers.

Title IX's other drawback is a tendency toward the picayune. Educators and lawyers are groping for the boundaries of its impact. While that process goes on, nagging controversies arise. How about the one over father - son or mother - daughter nights in the school cafeteriap

It's enough to make the community affairs officer choke on his speaker list.

At least one Livermore school board member balked at Title IX on a matter of outdated principal. It is federal blackmail, he charges. If the feds are going to make ground rules for the transfer of educational aid, then maybe Livermore should forego the funds. That's an old song and dance known as "local control." The fact is, however, federal aid funnels $1.1 million to Livermore schools, or roughly 20 per cent of the budget. Who can turn down a cool million these days?

Certainly not the school district.

Board members finally gave tacit approval to their Title IX policy paper Tuesday night. They may adopt it by the opening of classes in September.

Their reluctance has drawn the fire of at least one influential women's group in Alameda County. It has also illuminated the distasteful elements in an otherwise needed piece of legislation.

How does your pension grow?

It is a question one encounters in the darndest places these days. I can remember when only funny old men who used the spitoons in the railroad station waiting room were the ones to discuss pensions.

"Worked 40 years on the rails, and now they pay me $120 a month for my old age. Ain't hardly enough to pay my tobacco and beer bill." Those were sad days, for the oldsters.

But no more. Pensions are something to look forward to. By folks in their 50s, and younger.

"I figure what with the company plan, the Army Reserve pension and what I pick up from Social Security, I should be able to hang 'em up in another ten years, and live comfortably."

It is the proud claim of a breadwinner who once boasted of his job, but who now seeks nothing more from life than a good pension. "A comfortable living." It boils down to an individual's view of what's "comfortable."

Knew this fella who worked hard most of his life "to be able to retire young enough so's the wife and I can still enjoy life." His goal was $250,000 in savings, free and clear.

"By the time I got the $250,000, figuring inflation, income taxes, property taxes and an occasional trip, I found we simply couldn't make it." He went back to work, age 60, and now has a goal of "$300,000 free and clear by age 65, plus social security, and hope that does it."

He is also hoping social security does not go bottoms-up just about the time he stops paying in, and wants to be drawing out. The actuary tables are not encouraging.

"Have no fear," our congressman advises us. "Your beloved Congress is never going to allow Social Security to go bankrupt, not matter what." But what if the "what" includes a nation that is no longer able to support the system? Not enough working stiffs paying in, to balance the non - workers who are drawing out?

"Have no fear," our beioved congressman says. Which makes a body worry all the more, particularly Republicans.

Pension plans are in Trouble City. The ones financed by big unions and small corporations ... those underwritten by employee trusts and by local government. One of the big reasons New York City is on the financial skids, the auditors report.

"Trouble is the working stiff keeps demanding a better pension program, the politicians keep giving in, and someday the bills come due." They are overdue, overdrawn, in the Big Apple.

Even when you aren't employed by government, large or small, their pension programs are costing you. Recent study shows every man, woman and child in these United States is paying $170 per year in tax dollars to pick up the pension tab for retired governmental employees, of all kinds.

That probably includes the military pensions, which "by the end of the century will amount to more than this year's Pentagon budget." The nation's Armed Forces will someday consist of nothing more than a bunch of pensioners. Maybe that's what they mean by "An armchair war."

And we're losing ground. Them that's working are "in debt" to them that's all through working. In California that debt figures out to $214 per resident. The amount thee and me are in hock to government pension plans, past due. We're borrowing the money to pay the pensions.

Don't ask me what happens when the pension debt gets so big the banks stop making loans. Which is due to occur just about the time I qualify for my pension. Very discouraging.

Was reading the other day about Oakland firemen. Some of them figure to retire soon with a higher annual income than they had when fully employed. Given a disability benefit or two — and every fireman has at least one — the gross income at 75 will be well ahead of what it was at 55. And some of that non taxable.

There was this guy in merrie olde England who worked most of his adult life to avoid work. He boasted that, one way or another, society was supporting him and his wife, and quite comfortably, thank you. The press uncovered his little scheme. Guy became an instant hero. Englanders wrote letters to the editor. "Good for old Bert. Wish I knew how he did it."

On this side of the pond he could do it by simply being patient, waiting for Uncle Sugar to pick up the tab.

"But what happens when there are more Americans drawing pensions than there are working?" Your Congressman says "don't give it another thought." At least not while he's running for re-election.

Good coverage

Ms. Karen Boyle
Valley Times
Dear Karen:

On behalf of the Skill Bank staff, I'd like to thank you for the very good coverage you gave us in the Valley Times last week. The article was extremely effective for our client recruitment. We made contacts with 48 new clients on Thursday, July 22.

The success of Thursday's activity must largely be attributed to your well-written article on Family Tutorial Program. Needless to say, we were all happily surprised to see the article on front page.

Perhaps our next tactic will be to write an article addressed to Valley employers notifying them of the various skills and work experience of the clients we intook last week.

I'il be in touch; and thanks again for your cooperation.

Deadly Wind

The cyclone that hit Darwin, Australia, on Christmas Day, 1974, reached wind speeds of up to 160 miles per hour. The storm killed 50 people and destroyed 90 per cent of the city on Australia's remote north coast. An airlift evacuated half the 45,000 population. The code adopted for Darwin's rebuilding now bars structures incapable of withstanding cyclone-force winds.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Persons you do business with will prove more helpful today than friends you know socially. Don't expect favors from pals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be careful today not to make commitments impulsively. It may seem like the right thing to do, but could later cause problems.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You should fare rather well today with people and firms that you know. Negotiations with strangers is another story.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In speculative matters tread very cautiously today. You're looking for more than you have a right to expect.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're apt to be only partially successful today, because of a lack of persistence. Don't quit till the rewards are certain.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be sure to pick up your share of the tab if you're out on the town with friends today. Failure to ante up will make a poor impression.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could reap a surprise harvest today. There's also a good chance you'll not exploit the opportunity wisely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Intermediaries cannot be relied upon today to speak on your behalf. Get a personal audience with the big shot.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In money matters today you will be both shrewd and foolish. What you take in with one hand you're likely to give away with the other.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This could be a very rewarding day for you provided you're involved with progressive associates. A wrong choice of teammate lessens your probabilities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're not as tightlipped as you should be today regarding information that's best kept confidential. Don't let the cat out of the bag.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In your commercial transactions today it's wisest not to take anything for granted. Ask questions and have the terms put in writing.

PN breezes to 11-1 victory

CAMPBELL — Scoring in every inning, Pleasanton National swamped Capitola - Soquel, 11-1, to advance to the semi-finals of the Section 3 Little League Playoffs at San Tomas School here yesterday evening.

The offensive explosion, easily the largest in post-season play for Pleasanton, almost overshadowed a strong pitching performance by left - hander Chris Elbert, who gave up just five hits and recorded six strikeouts.

Although delighted by his team's hitting spree, manager Bob Ferolito could not forget what had brought Pleasanton this far.

"It's been defense and pitching all along — and that's the name of the game," he said.

The fact that his team must now face powerful, and All-Star oriented, Campbell today didn't faze Ferolito.

"The kids play loose and don't get down on themselves," he explained.

The Nationals will send right-hander Dave Ferguson to the mound against Campbell, which defeated North Mountain View, 5-3, yesterday to gain the semi-finals.

Pleasanton led all the way last night.

With two out in the first inning, third baseman Tom Northam blasted a home run that seemed to shake up Capitola-Soquel starter Ken Brandt. Following Northam's blast, Brandt yielded a double to Barry Mori before walking three straight batters to force in a run.

In the second, Mark Kammermeier walked and scored after singles by Trip Gotelli and Mori.

Although Capitola - Soquel managed a run in the top of the third, Pleasanton quickly got it back. After Dave Blanchard replaced Dave Parker, who had singled, on the base paths via a fielders choice, singles by Gary Morgan and Kammermeier brought him in.

Pleasanton put the game out of reach during a wild fourth-inning rally. After Northam and Mori had reached on errors, C-S reliever Todd Morgen walked two more batters and was yanked from the game. His replacement, Randy Lunsford faired little better, walking in another run before giving up RBI singles to Blanchard and Gotelli.

Lunsford walked in another run in the fourth and gave up an unearned run in the fifth before breezing through the latter half of the National batting order with a suddenly-discovered curve ball.

In the other bracket San Mateo dumped Alum Rock 10-4 and Saratoga blanked Salinas 6-0. Pleasanton meets District 44 champ Campbell at 5:45 p.m. this afternoon.

Thomasson's HR, double sparks SF over Braves

ATLANTA — Gary Thomasson smashed a home run, then doubled and scored the go-ahead run as the San Francisco Giants trimmed the Atlanta Braves 2-1 Thursday night.

The Braves tied it in the second. Ken Henderson walked, went to third on Darrell Chaney's single and scored when Cito Gaston forced Chaney at second.

Thomasson opened the Giants' third with a double, advanced on an infield hit by Perez, and scored on Bobby Murcer's infield grounder.

Jim Barr, 10-7, yielded only three hits in the seven innings he worked before Randy Moffitt came on to record his eighth save. Loser Phil Niekro now is 11-8.

The Giants put runners on base early in eacn of the first three innings, scoring solo runs in the first and third. Thomasson hit Phil Niekro's second pitch of the game into the right field seats for his fourth homer of the season.

San Francisco failed in the second after Dave Rader delivered a one-out single to right. He was forced at second and Barr fanned to end the inning.

Niekro retired eight in a row during one stretch before Marty Perez opened the sixth with an infield single.

Barr had a string of 10 straight batters retired until he walked Jim Wynn with one down in the sixth.

Jerry Royster singled to open the third for Atlanta, reached second on a grounder, but was stranded.

Ethics code for EBAL?

A committee of East Bay Athletic League students met yesterday and voted to approve an athletic code of ethics for the league.

The meeting, which was held at Amador High School, was attended by student representives from every EBAL school except for San Ramon and Monte Vista. The students passed a suggestion to encourage the EBAL Board of Managers (made up of the league's principals) to approve a code adopted by the league's basketball coaches and modified by the students.

The proposal, if accepted by the Board of Managers, would affect all EBAL sports.

The original code, adopted by the basketball coaches in April, had eight rules layed down in an attempt to improve sportsmanship in the EBAL sport.

One rule was added and another modified by the student leaders at yesterday's meeting.

Mike Goodison of Amador, one of the EBAL's top running backs, suggested that the students call for a new rule that players must shake hands before each contest. The initial rule states that coaches should encourage players to shake hands just after the contests.

The other change concerned the sixth rule. The original rule stated that the Contra Costa Officials Association should enforce rules concerning bench conduct during games. The students suggested that the responsibility should lie with the Board of Managers.

Several people present felt that there should be more emphasis placed on fan behavior. However, most of the students felt that it would be nearly impossible to legislate rules concerning unruly fans.

Other avenues were discussed as possibilities in curbing unsportsmanlike behavior at the athletic events.

A jubilee which would bring together students from different schools before athletic events was discussed. This idea would see athletes and students from several schools competing in sports events against each other without regard to what high school they attended.

"In other words, we would have students from two different high schools competing in sports like a sack race or volleyball," said Amador student body president Mark Zevanove. "Kids from each school would play on the same team. For example, kids from Amador and Dublin could play against another group of kids from those two schools."

After-game dances for competing schools and discussions with the various school booster groups were also suggested as possible ways the students could work to improve athletic relations between the EBAL schools.

Don Landers, former Foothill High School principal and an advisor to the EBAL student committee, felt there there should be more attention paid to unruly fan behavior in the code.

"The students should take more responsibility in making sure there's no unruly crowd behavior," he said. "I've seen fans cheer when a football player is injured. It's unfair to put all the pressure on the coaches."

The committee will meet again September 30 at California High School to discuss further action.

Defense key for CC team

PLEASANT HILL — Defense was the order of the day in daily workouts conducted by co-coaches Charlie Tourville and Roger Leonard of the Contra Costa All-Stars yesterday at Diablo Valley College here.

The Contra Costa squad is preparing for its meeting with Alameda County Saturday, Aug. 14 on the DVC field.

Leonard, who coaches at Northgate High, worked with secondary backs while Tourville, who guided Alhambra High to a NCS crown last season, took the linemen under his wing.

San Ramon High's Mike Bowles, the only East Bay Athletic League player on the Contra Costa squad, should figure highly in the coaches' plans for the All-Star contest.

The Arizona State-bound running back gained over 800 yards last season and is looking to gain about 200 against the Alameda All-Stars.

Bowles, at 6-4, 220 pounds, has 10.2 speed. He is especially adept at running up the middle and with his size and speed could cause problems for Alameda.

sports

Contra Costa is scheduled to face its first contact today, a test that should bring out the true ability of the players, according to both coaches. Workouts will be at 9:30 a.m. and again at 2:30 p.m. The team will have a scrimmage tomorrow.

Another injury stuns 49er coach

SAN JOSE — With five regular offensive linemen injured, the San Francisco 49ers lost a rookie replacement for one of them Thursday when Johnny Miller broke a bone in his right hand during practice.

Miller, from Livingstone, N.C. College, was on the roster as a defensive lineman and linebacker but was pressed into service as an offensive guard in Sunday's National Football League preseason opener at Seattle. He performed well, losing a tooth in the process.

Coach Monte Clark is hoping to acquire some linemen waived by other clubs and Thursday picked up free agent Bill Lueck, an offensive guard who played seven years with Green Bay and last season with the Philadelphia Eagles.

Clark admitted he's concerned about risking injury to the 49ers' newly acquired and high-priced quarterback, Jim Plunkett, because of a makeshift and inexperienced line to protect him.

Christian billboard - a first

LIVERMORE— The pre-teen class of Vacation Bible School at Our Savior's Lutheran Church designed and painted the Christian billboard on display at Portola and L Streets. The slogan reads, "He died for us, we can live for Him. Come on up to God."

Rental prices for outdoor signs seemed to prohibit the idea of actually turning their design into a billboard. However , Bill Brossman of Eller Outdoor Advertising Co. of Calif., Inc., made arrangements with their publicity department to give the class space on their board.

Twelve children designed the poster with the aid of Don Dorn and Patti Lopez, their V.B.S. instructors. Before designing, Don and Patti drove their class around Livermore to view and study local billboards for letter size, spacing, color and simplicity.

The completed design was checked by Jack Foote, the art and design director at Eller and Co. He arranged for the class to use his paper and to have their design enlarged.

A special guest speaker will be Sister Ruth of the Society of Saint Francis, an Anglican religious order, whose members came to San Francisco about three years ago at the invitation of Bishop Myers. St. Francis is the patron saint of San Francisco and members of this order, both men and women, work mainly in hospitals.

Nursery care is provided at the later service and a coffee hour will follow.

Rich Martin in concert

DUBLIN — Rich Martin, according to the Valley Christian Center, is "without a doubt one of the best contemporary Christian songwriters and singers in the nation today." He will be appearing in a free concert this Sunday, August 8, at the church's 4 p.m. Fish Factory for Youth, 7400 San Ramon Rd.

Rich, now making his home in the San Francisco bay area, has, for the past three years, been singing at concerts, coffee houses, high school and college campuses throughout California.

His style is said to be gentle and creative while communicating the Gospel in a manner relevant to our present day culture. His songs come from a reservoir of personal experience, as well as from a deep understanding of the human codition and God's provision for our weakness.

Rich Martin was at one time associated with the Sonny and Cher show as part of their back-up band; aswell as a studio musician. His experisnces also include many years, playing with groups, recording six singles and a couple of albums.

In 1972 Rich committed his life to Jesus and began turning his talents to the Lord. Since that time he has been developing as an outstanding minister of the Gospel through the song God has placed in his heart

Martin's first album for the Lord is a combination gf "meaningful humor" and deep sensitivity to the call of the Holy Spirt upon the hearts of believers, as well as a specific message of salvation to the unbeliever.

Safari kids still need funds

LIVERMORE — Bicentennial Safari - ers have a long way to go to reach their goal, despite a summer of vigorous fundraising.

It will cost some $20,000 for all 40 of the seventh, eighth and ninth grade students to make their planned trip to the East Coast next month on a Bicentennial tour of the "Colonies." So far, they have collected $7,000.

All is not lost, since in order to be eligible for the trip the students' parents had to promise to back it up to $700 per student. But they had hoped to be able to earn the money themselves, and still plan to try hard for their goal.

They have already held a bike - a - thon, wine tasting, art auction, meat raffle and a flea market. Current projects include:

—A newspaper recycling van in the Junction School parking lot.

—An aluminum can collection at St. Michael's School (plea se leave cans tied in a bag at the Third Street entrance.)

—Benefit film performances: Michell School on Elaine Avenue, 10:30 a.m. Aug. 11; Jackson Avenue School. 2 p.m.; Rincon Avenue School, 7 p.m., all on the same date; donations are 50 cents to $1.50; popcorn and drinks will be sold.

—Pizza night, Aug. 31 at Potter's; the Safari will receive a percentage of the profits on pizza sold that night.

—Carnival at The Barn, Aug. 21; cake walk, dunking booth and other games; hot dogs, ice cream and other goodies to eat; 3 - 9 p.m.

— First aid kits and cans of peanut crunch will be sold, the latter at $1.25 a can.

— Car wash Saturday, Aug. 7, at the Texaco station in the Granada shopping center.

Participants of the Safari were picked by lottery from among those whose parents said they could pay for the jaunt. Bob Hansen, a sixth grade teacher at Rincon School, will lead the group and five other adult chaperones will go along.

The tour leaves Sept. 18, heading for New York, Washington, D.C., Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Virginia and Maryland.

They have been attending summec school classes at Portola School to enrich their knowledge of the Revolutionary period in history in preparation for the big trip.

Participants include:

From Junction School: Dennis DeBok, Steve Coeville, Kevin Vietor, Susie Mast, Douglas Coronado, Joseph Moyle.

From Mendenhall: Mike Starkey, Shawn Owens, Michael Miller, Susanne Moreland, David Kappadahl, Des Elder, Johanne Quock, Tammie Lee, Jamie McPhee, Pamela Pierce

Senate eases smog rules for autos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed legislation Thursday, 78 to 13, to revise and broaden the federal Clean Air Act.

The measure includes new restrictions to limit industrial development that might significantly increase air pollution in relatively smog-free areas of the nation.

It also provides for two additional years for the automobile industry to meet rigid emission standards.

The new deadline for cars to comply fully with standards for emissions of hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide was set for 1979 models, with full compliance with a new relaxed standard for nitrogen oxide control set for 1980 models.

An amendment by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., to force compliance one year earlier was defeated 61 to 30.

Senate passage of the bill cleared it for a conference with the House, which is considering a similar measure.

The Senate bill directs studies by the National Academy of Science on the effects of aerosol spray containers on the possible depletion of the ozone layer protecting the earth from the ultraviolet radiation of the sun.

If the Environmental Protection Agency finds that aerosol containers containing fluorocarbons may endanger human health, it would be required to propose regulations to restrict their manufacture and use by Jan. 1, 1978.

Community College trustees approve new $45 million budget

Lesher News Bureau

MARTINEZ — Community college trustees approved a $45 million budget Wednesday night in four minutes and then took an hour to try to unravel the cost of campus soft drinks.

The $45 million Contra Costa Community College District budget is up $4 million from the year before.

While college trustees said the tax rate will show a decline for the fourth consecutive year, the actual cost to the individual homeowner will be higher in most cases.

Chancellor Harry Buttimer admitted that the reason the tax rate could be lowered was because of the increase in the county's assessed valuation.

Estimates are that the value of property in Contra Costa has increased an average of 13 per cent. This means a home valued at $40,000 in 1975 theoretically was worth $45,200 in 1976.

In 1975 the owner of such a house paid a tax rate rate of 72.7 cents per $100 assessed valuation to support the college district. In 1976 with the tax rate lowered to 72.2 cents from 72.7 cents, he would have to pay $81.59, compared to the previous $72.70 because the house was worth more.

The 1976-77 budget includes construction costs at the district's three colleges totaling $5.1 million.

This includes $2.8 million for Contra Costa College for a little theater and the start of an applied arts center.

When the project is completed, the total estimated cost will be $8 million.

Total personnel costs in the budget are listed at $26.5 million. Salary costs are up by over 11 per cent, including a 6.1 per cent wage hike and new staff members.

No one appeared at the public hearing to inquire about the district budget. Trustees were satisfied after asking two questions, one on the earthquake safety levy which allows the district to move buildings out of the vulnerable area at Contra Costa College and the other on student financial aid.

Trustee William Moses questioned whether the district had any control over the programs. He wanted to know whether the district could deny aid or had to go along with federal regulations.

The federal government will provde $2 million in student grants and work study funds this coming fiscal year.

Most of the meeting was taken up with the vending machine contract at Contra Costa College. The college board rejected both bids of Canteen Co. and the R & S Vending Co. after an hour of questioning.

The R & S representative told trustees that he was advised to raise the price of his soft drinks to 20 cents by Contra Costa College cafeteria personnel.

The staff did not recommend the R & S bid because it was 5 cents higher per drink than the Canteen bid.

However, the R & S bid provided more commission to the student association at the college.

By the time explanations came forth from the district staff, board members admitted they were confused and concerned over the misinformation that may have been given one of the bidders.

Both bids were rejected. The cost of the contract last year was $50,000.

New school bus bill would tighten rules

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Legislation tightening regulation of private buses used to transport school children moved to the Assembly floor Tuesday under the watchful eyes of a committee of parents from Yuba City.

The measure, by Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, and co-authored by 16 other senators and 32 Assembly members, easily cleared the lower House Ways and Means Committee by a 12 to 0 vote.

It was introduced after 28 Yuba City High School students and a teacher were killed in the May 21 crash of a chartered bus near Martinez.

The bill would, after Jan. 1, require private buses used to transport school children to be inspected and certified by the California Highway Patrol.

Drivers would have to possess school bus drivers' licenses.

The state Department of Education would provide maintenance inspection guides for weekly use by bus operators.

Mrs. Charles Engstrom, whose daughter was a victim of the May 21 crash, was among 11 persons attending the hearing as a legislative committee of parents whose children were aboard the bus.

"We support it and we're working with him (Collier)," Mrs. Engstrom said of the bill. "We've made suggestions."

None of the parents testified before the committee, but "we were prepared to speak up," she added.

She said the committee has worked at "the state and local level to effect changes" in laws and try to prevent another school bus tragedy.

The measure would appropriate about $250,000 from the State Transportation Fund and the Driver Training Penalty Fund to finance the expanded requirements of the CHP, Department of Motor Vehicles and the Department of Education.

Cut out of the bill Tuesday was an amendment to place public school buses under the same requirements. A spokesman for Collier said that issue will be addressed by another bill by Sen. Albert Rodda, D Sacramento.

The bill is SB 2199.
